What is practically required is to know that the smaller time constant is so large that it may be safely treated as infinite; so it is convenient to have an inferior limit in a simple form. If we write equation (8) in the form $Pf + Q + B = 0$, then if the roots be real it may be easily shewn that the smaller time constant is greater than B/Q ; if the roots be imaginary the real time constant is $Q/2P$. But it is not likely that much error will arise in practice through neglecting the self-induction in calculating the time constant. For when L is large enough to govern the smaller time constant, the latter approximates to the value $(g + B) L$, where B is a positive constant depending on the resistances. Now the selfinduction of a galvanometer coil of given shape and size varies approximately as the square of the number of turns, as does also the resistance. Thus g/L will have much the same value in all similar galvanometers. A short time ago I determined the self induction of a sensitive mirror galvanometer experimentally. L was 5 earth quadrants, while g was 13,000 ohms. So g/L was about 2400 in this case. Even if the time of charging were only j th of a second, the error in the value of the capacity produced by treating the time constant as x instead of 2,400, would be less...
